TUCSON, Ariz. – The University of Arizona Center for Integrative Medicine (UACIM) announced that Lise Alschuler, ND, has joined the Center's faculty. In practice since 1994, Dr. Alschuler is board certified in naturopathic oncology.

Dr. Alschuler brings extensive experience to UACIM. She is the executive director of TAP Integrative, a nonprofit educational resource for integrative practitioners. She also maintains a naturopathic oncology practice in Scottsdale, Ariz., and co-hosts the Five to Thrive Live radio show on the Cancer Support Network. She has been an invited speaker at more than 100 scientific and medical conferences.

"I am honored to join the faculty of the Center for Integrative Medicine," Dr. Alschuler said. "The Center has been, and continues to be, at the forefront of health-care transformation. Through its programs, faculty and alumni, UACIM is securing a place in health care for whole-person-focused, integrative thought and practice. I am thrilled to add my contributions as an educator, naturopathic doctor and business woman to the already rich offerings of the Center."

Dr. Alschuler is a graduate of Bastyr University and a past-president and board member of the American Association of Naturopathic Physicians. She also is a board member and immediate past president of the Oncology Association of Naturopathic Physicians.

About the University of Arizona Center for Integrative Medicine

The University of Arizona Center for Integrative Medicine (UACIM) is leading the transformation of health care by creating, educating and actively supporting a community that embodies the philosophy and practice of healing-oriented medicine. UACIM is internationally recognized for its evidence-based clinical practice, innovative educational programs and research that substantiates the field of integrative medicine and influences public policy. Since its creation in 1994, UACIM's vision of making integrative care available to all is being realized worldwide: UACIM graduates now are guiding more than 1 million patients to take a greater role in their health and healing.
